PRESS RELEASE:

Forbidden book now freely available

The Hague, 19 April 2024 — The English translation of The Cover-up General, a book exposing a Dutch cover-up related to the Srebrenica genocide, is now freely available for download. The non-fiction thriller, written by Edwin F. Giltay, was previously banned due to objections from military intelligence circles. However, the ban was overturned by the Court of Appeal in The Hague, affirming the book's accuracy.

The author is now offering the complete book at no cost in PDF format on his website thecoverupgeneral.com, making it accessible worldwide.

The international edition of the 'forbidden book' was launched at the Banned Books Museum in Tallinn, Estonia. Director Joseph Dunnigan was presented with the first copy in a packed library. He highlighted: 'This is a very rare example in our collection of an author successfully challenging a book ban.'

Moreover, the author has recently prevailed in two additional court battles. The Dutch National Ombudsman, Reinier van Zutphen, who keeps the dossier on the scandal in his safe, was judged to have acted 'unlawfully'. He was forced to pay a fine to the author for impeding transparency.

A video registration of the book launch can be seen here: vimeo.com/935927986